the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization
(UNESCO)

ISBN 978-988-17852-9-9

March 2014; 93 pages; US$16/HK$100

Using a comparative lens, this book examines possible government responses to the expansion of private supplementary tutoring. In general, the book suggests, the sector should be given more attention. The work shows wide diversity in the regulations introduced by governments in the Asian region. It notes not only that these governments can learn much from each other, but also that policy makers in other parts of the world can usefully look at patterns in Asia. The book also stresses the value of partnerships between governments, tutoring providers, schools, teachers' unions, and other bodies.

No.9:
Shadow Education: Private Supplementary Tutoring and Its Implications for Policy Makers in Asia

Mark Bray and Chad Lykins

Publishers:

Comparative Education Research Centre (CERC) in collaboration with Asian Development Bank (ADB)

ISBN 978-92-9092-658-0

May 2012; 100 pages; US$16/HK$100

In all parts of Asia, households devote considerable expenditures to private supplementary tutoring. Such tutoring is widely called shadow education, because it mimics school systems. As the curriculum in the school system changes, so does the shadow.

This study documents the scale and nature of shadow education in different parts of the region. For many decades, shadow education has been a major phenomenon in East Asia. Now it has spread throughout the region, and it has far-reaching economic and social implications.
